Help Teachers Love Reading

Teachers can employ multiple strategies to encourage reading in their classrooms, but attempts to motivate readers may ring hollow if teachers don't model strong reading behaviors themselves. Teachers who are engaged, avid readers can have an immense impact on the readers in their classroom. In this presentation, Brian Wilhorn will illustrate how a teacher's familiarity with children's literature positively affects classroom reading instruction and assessment. Come learn how it happens, how it affects students, and the books that will help.
